

Detlef Stapf

Transcending Humanity

On the Nature of Artificial Intelligence

Translation by Sarah Signer

Contents

Preface	9
1 Ignoring ignorance	13
2 Thinking without beginning or end	19
3 Growing inward	27
4 The end of explicability	31
5 There is no such thing as a coincidence	35
6 Evolution is powered by electricity	41
7 Existence as a form of faulty mirroring	47
8 The birth of language	53
9 In the Cambrian design lab	61
10 The brain as the developmental centre	67
11 Upright thinking	73
12 Collective Intelligence	77
13 Shakespeare, the recombiner	87
14 The evolution of languages	101
15 Dispatched word parcels	105
16 Inherited memes	109

17	In the beginning, there was music	113
18	Intelligence does not equal intelligence	119
19	Superior stupidity	131
20	Calculating thought	137
21	Measuring fear in metres	151
22	Peering into the heads of strangers	159
23	The illusion of free will	163
24	The developmental path of inventions	167
25	Genius requires mass	173
26	The toolmakers of knowledge	193
27	A blueprint for societal formation	201
28	Unjust democracy	211
29	The boundary phenomenon of war	219
30	We cannot act ecologically	229
31	The end of the narrative of progress	239
32	AI needs no consciousness	245
33	Space travel is science fiction	257
34	Dangling the carrot	263
35	Observing the observer	273
	Literature	275